

Abstract

A method of transmitting a video image including an object of interest comprises capturing a sequence of images in which the object of interest occupies a fraction of each image, tracking the object of interest by selecting and extracting a region of each image including the object of interest, and coding only the selected region of each captured image.

Fig. 1